WASHINGTON, Aug. 31 .- A final vote on the soldiers' bonus bbill before adjournment of the Senate

The days' discussion in the Senate was opened by Senator Lodge the Republican leader, who argued that the government owed compen-sation to th soldiers and disputed the theory that the proposed bonus would prove too great a burden on the treasury. The majority leader pointed out that practicacily all of the allied nations had recognized the service of their troops in a substantial manner and declared that such grants could not be treated as commercializing patriotism.
